

Graduate Program in Language Education and Communication

This program aims to (a) familiarize future EFL and JFL teachers with the major issues in second/foreign language education, (b) provide them with instruments for applied linguistics research, and (c) train them to be competent language teachers. The program also provides experienced English teachers at Japanese junior high schools and high schools with opportunities to polish their teaching and research techniques. Regardless of nationality, gender or age, strong candidates for admission are those who have a strong desire to be expert language teachers and researchers and aspire to play major roles in and outside of this country by utilizing the acquired expertise.